Skills & Abilities

MANAGEMENT

- Many of the positions I've held in my jobs have required me to oversee others that I work with or manage the daily processes of the company. Due to this some employers have even paid to send me to management training to help learn proper leadership, communication, and critical thinking skills to solve problems and keep the shift running smoothly.

CRITICAL THINKING

- Some examples of how my abilities in critical thinking have been crucial to my work is the fast-paced nature of my shift supervisor position with McDonalds and the ability to deescalate, evaluate, and repair an issue whether it be with a customer or another coworker.

LEADERSHIP

- Among some of the extra-curricular activities listed from my time in high school I had the opportunity to be a team captain for not only the softball team but also the basketball team. I was also given the opportunity to work as a head lifeguard before my time in management for McDonalds which gave me some incredible insight as to how its best to go about managing and arranging a shift rotation that benefits the most involved.
